

SENO OTWAY PENGUINS COLONY

The excursion will start bordering the mythic Magallanes Strait, one of the sailing route with greater traffic in the world, used by the most courageous sailor in the history such as Drake, Sarmiento de Gamboa, Fitz-Roy, and Charles Darwin among others. During the trip it is possible to observe different species of birds, and if it is a lucky day, maybe dolphins. The route will make a northwest turn to take a land path penetrating the Patagonian steppe, where it is possible to appreciate several ranches and some native flora species. The fauna is composed of rheas, wild goose, condors, gulls, eagles, foxes and foxes. Before getting closer to Seno Otway penguin colony, the path borders an open-pit coal mine, one of the main economic activity. At the end of the path is located the small Magallanes penguins colony where they go every year to breed and feed. In this place, it is necessary to walk 1.5km on a wooden path and there are three observation points.
